FALL HAPPINESS

It was the perfect autumn day for the Harvest Festival on Saturday. The cool fall breeze made nice weather for light jackets. The aroma of Bad Axe B-B-Q and the Lions Club grill wafted through the festival. Not to mention, the sweet scents of candles and bath soaps.

Children excitedly took the challenge of the Mega Thrill Obstacle Course and felt the tickle in their tummies with the swings. Marionette puppets danced through the crowd on strings attached to their new owners, while gobs of cotton candy quickly disappeared to reveal smiling faces. Animals were at every corner, whether on stage, in the barn, roaming free or made of balloon.

Residents were enlivened by all the vendors lining their campus. The community joined them going from booth to booth to see all of their wonderful pieces. Charming Pewter Cottage took the time to explain how their items are handcrafted with some being antiqued and even painted.

The stage took on a personality all its own as everyone gathered around to see the sloth, scorpion, baby tiger and much more! The magic man had the crowd in stitches with magic tricks and Puff the magic rabbit. D.J. Jeremy Maze had our campus hopping...literally, playing catchy tunes and dance mixes for festival guests to shake, dip, cha-cha and bounce to.

FAMILY AND FRIENDS THANKSGIVING DINNER

It is almost time once again for our annual Family and Friends Thanksgiving Dinner. On Saturday November 18th at 1:00 P.M., we will offer a Thanksgiving buffet with many of the traditional dishes.

All of our residents' family and friends are invited and encouraged to attend. The cost is $10 and includes the buffet, dessert and drink. RSVP by November 10th to reserve your spot.

MISTAKEN INVASION

It was on October 30th, 1938, a Sunday evening and prime time for listening to the radio, that Orson Welles broadcast H.G. Wells' science fiction story The War of the Worlds, a dramatization of a Martian invasion of Earth. No one anticipated that the story would cause a national panic. The broadcast began with an innocuous weather report and live music, which was interrupted with a news report detailing the sudden invasion of Earth by hideous aliens. When the actors realistically announced that Martians were wiping out major cities, listeners flew into a panic. As many as a million people believed the invasion was real. Welles thought the controversy would ruin his career, but the wild performance earned him a Hollywood contract and superstardom.

Join us at 3:30 P.M. in the Day Room to reminisce and enjoy the original broadcast played from online. Drinks will be provided.

Peachtree Inn

FRESH CORN ON THE COB

In order for the residents to get their fresh-picked corn on the cob, they had to work for it. So, they shucked three dozen ears of corn to serve for dinner at the Peachtree Inn and Pepperberry Suites.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

The ladies from Peachtree Inn sold soup at the annual Harvest Festival. In preparation they had to cut up all the vegetables. The monies raised from the soup sale go to the activities department.

HELPING THOSE IN NEED

Stone Pear's Justin Shaw, L.P.N. and local First Responder (pictured here, top right) initiated local relief efforts for victims of Hurricane Harvey. Justin, upon hearing of the disaster, left in the wake of Hurricane Harvey, launched attempts that quickly spread throughout the tri-state area to provide much needed assistance in Texas. On September 5th, Justin and others drove 3 truckloads of locally donated supplies and resources, with hands to lend, in a time crucial help was needed. Relief for victims of recent disasters is ongoing. NPR recommends CharityNavigator.Org As a website where you can research organizations before donating to help those in need.
