Westminster Village Resident Spotlight

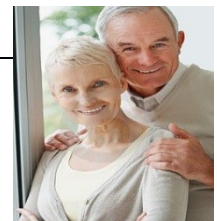

“We love living here with so many friends and colleagues we’ve known through our church and Ball State, and we’ve met so many new friends. After taking care of our parents’ homes in other cities and states, we didn’t want to put that burden on our girls, since they all live away from Muncie. Westminster Village was the perfect solution for us!” –Norm and Joyce Beck, Residents of Westminster Village. Norm received his B.S, M.S, and Ph.D. from Ball State, and began his career there. He retired in 2004 as an Associate V.P. of Human Resources and Auxiliary Services at BSU. He is currently Secretary of the George and Frances Ball Foundation and an Elder at First Presbyterian Church. Before retiring, Joyce was an Executive Secretary with the Ball Associates – Ball Foundation.

CCRC Living – Fact vs Myth

Myth: “It costs so much money; I could never afford to live there.”

Fact: When families are considering a retirement community, they don’t take into consideration the costs to live in their homes, such as; utilities, taxes, an emergency response system, maintenance, security, housekeeping, food, and maybe a membership to the Fitness Center. Actually, folks need to weigh the intangibles as well, such as access to health care, socialization of living in a community and sharing interests with friends and neighbors, and the accessibility of a caring staff. At a Continuing Care Retirement Community, such as Westminster Village, these costs are all included in the monthly fee. With all that is included, it may not be as “expensive” as many people think!
